Find out how to use Photoshop This article will give you a basic introduction to the elements of Photoshop and how to get started with your photo manipulation. Starting up Photoshop To start up Photoshop you need to download the Photoshop file from the Adobe website. You will need to download the application to a folder where you have write access. The Photoshop website does not advise users to upload the application to a web server where others can access it, but you should still keep the installer on a local hard disk where you can install Photoshop on your computer. After downloading, you should immediately install the application. This can be done by double-clicking the downloaded file and waiting for the install to be completed. You may be prompted for your administrator password during the installation. You are now ready to use Photoshop for all your image manipulation needs. The Interface Starting up Photoshop you are first greeted with the interface. You can access the interface by clicking on the icon in the taskbar (if you are using Windows). For Mac users, the icon can be found under the application's name in the Dock. The main interface is divided into several areas. On the left are images that you can load into Photoshop, if you are working from a memory card. The Toolbar When you first start Photoshop, you see a blank canvas, which is your image area. The toolbar is located in the upper right side of the interface. The toolbar contains a variety of tools. There are eight toolbars along the top, each of which provides access to a set of tools, which in turn can be combined to perform a wide variety of functions. The top toolbar is divided into the following areas: The Selection tool (first item in the toolbar) enables you to select and manipulate your image. You can move, copy, delete, and resize selected areas of your image by dragging or clicking on them. You can also select multiple areas by holding down the Ctrl key while selecting an area or clicking on multiple areas. The tool includes the standard zoom buttons for changing the size of the image. The Selection Brush tool (second item in the toolbar) lets you use an already existing color to paint with. This will not be explained in much detail in this article, but it's easy to use and very effective. The Marquee tool (third item in the toolbar) lets you move a selected area by dragging to a new location. You can also

Q: SQL query (which method is faster between methods of executing a query) Which method would be faster? Complex query 1: SELECT * FROM myTable WHERE gender = 'female' OR gender='male' OR gender='other' Complex query 2: SELECT * FROM myTable WHERE gender = 'female' AND (gender='male' OR gender='other') Complex query 3: SELECT * FROM myTable WHERE gender = 'female' AND (gender IN ('male', 'other')) I know that I can only say query 3 is the fastest. But if I can say query 1 is the fastest, then which is it? I can't say query 2 is the fastest because query 1 and 2 are equivalent. When I run a test using these three methods in the PHPMyAdmin, I get the following results. I know the number of rows in the database is irrelevant but I am confused with the result. Which method of execution should I trust? A: The former is the fastest The speed test run by PHPMyAdmin doesn't seem to have account for a well known SQL feature called Optimizer. The latter are all 1/3 of the speed of the former While it is technically correct to say that query 3 is the fastest as you said in your question, it is not (on average). Since the article explains all the details, I will just explain what is going on. When the query is issued, the server will evaluate query 1, and query 2; the one that is faster wins. At that point, the server will issue the exact same result for the query. When the server issues the query, it is optimized to give the best execution plan. It will find the most efficient way to execute the query. When you issued the query, the query plan may have been slow. This means that some of the results may not have been produced in the time specified. Because of this, PHPMyAdmin may have sped up the query by using different (optimal) strategies to produce the same results. This is why the third query is always faster. A: I cannot tell which is the fastest without access to the EXPLAIN statements. However, as your results show, we do have a winner: 3

Beketovtsy Beketovtsy were farmworkers who worked on a land owned by Mikhail Beket, a politician and merchant active in the state of Kievan Rus' in the 12th and 13th centuries. Their name originated as "geket," a Slavic word for horse. The great majority of beketovtsy were serfs. In 1216, the name beket was added to that of serf as a restriction on freedom. Serfs were usually drafted from families of soldiers or people with technical skills. In 1235, the problem became so acute that Nicholas Mstislavich, Archbishop of Novgorod, sent a letter to the Metropolitan of Kiev, Peter, urging him to raise the wages of beketovtsy, who lived mainly in the villages of Tyashevo and Podslyatsya, and to add their own names to their work. In the same year, Peter issued a decree that all serfs should be registered. This was repeated the following year. In 1329, Prince Daniil of Olshanski and Pereyaslavlohorsk was forced to sign a document in which he divided up the beketovtsy among his people and agreed to pay these serfs an annual rent. This document is preserved in the State Historical Archives of Ukraine in Lviv. The beketovtsy at Podslyatsya were registered in 1232–33. They were listed in a list drawn up by Moses of Kaluga. Registration as "beketovtsy" was restricted to persons willing to work for six years. Each beketovtsy was issued a complete group of clothes. They were obliged to provide all their own tools and were allowed a share in the profits. They also had to obey the proprietor and were subject to fines if they did not meet their obligations. There were nine beketovtsy in the towns of Podslyatsya and Tyashevo. There were two beketovtsy in the fields around Podslyatsya, three in Tyashevo and four in other villages. Their names were recorded according to the letter "m". Five of them remained with their farm; others moved to nearby towns or became laborers of the local wealthy families. The term beketovtsy is an epithet from the late Middle Ages, based on the word geket, meaning a horse and denoting a group of horse-owners. The be
