A SECONDARY school teacher and her husband have been jailed for 13 months for giving alcohol to children. Byron Bay Local Court heard that the convicted teacher had 'hypnotised' the children into not drinking alcohol. The teacher and her husband were also seen by the court offering their child to his friends to drink alcohol. A former maths and economics teacher and her husband were jailed for 13 months for having alcohol and other drugs for their children in Byron Bay. Darlene Vlacnik and her husband Matthew Evans, both 40, were caught having alcohol and drugs with the same children in the Bay. They pleaded guilty to four charges of giving alcohol to a child and one of supplying alcohol to a minor. The couple, who taught at an east coast school, were also seen by the court offering their child to his friends to drink alcohol. In sentencing the pair, Judge Matthew Oxenham said he accepted that in their case 'it was the children who provided the alcohol not the parents'. He said the fact that they were trying to stop children having alcohol was a good reason why the couple were facing the prospect of being sent to prison. Judge Oxenham said he had 'distinct concerns about the influence of alcohol on children' and concluded that the accused couple had acted wilfully in getting the children to drink alcohol. He said he had to impose a 12-month sentence for each offence. The teacher and her husband both pleaded guilty to four charges each of giving alcohol to a child and one of supplying alcohol to a minor.Guido De Roo Guido De Roo (; born 25 September 1995) is a Dutch football striker. Q: Getting the element of array which is max I've got a dictionary: var dic = new Dictionary { [0] = 100, [1] = 200, [2] = 1000, [3] = 5000, [4] = 3000, [5] = 8000 }; So I want to get an element which is max. I'm trying: var element = dic["[5]"]; So I want to get the value: 8000 A: I think what you want is the element with the highest value. This would be the last element in your list: var max = dic.Max(x => x.Value); If you want to get all the values with the maximum value, you can use a Tuple, which will get the values in the same order as your dictionary: var max = dic.Select(x => x.Value) .OrderBy(x => x) .First(); You can also just use OrderBy in place of Select, since OrderBy will return an IEnumerable in the same order as the original list. To get the last index, just use Last. var max = dic.Max(x => x.Value) .OrderBy(x => x) .First() .ToString(); The present invention relates to a method for manufacturing a semiconductor device and, more particularly, to a method for reducing interlayer tunneling currents in a dual damascene structure. Recently, in high performance integrated circuits (ICs) fabricated using various advanced semiconductor manufacturing processes, a dual damascene technique has been used as an inter-metal or inter-layer connecting technique for forming a multilayer interconnections that are designed to accomplish a high-speed operation and low power consumption. With the dual damascene technique, via holes and interconnections can be formed in one (or more) conductive layers
