Michael Tanner is considered a "movement of one" for the cultural history of Zen in America. His style is unique with forward thinking and creativity that challenges the core beliefs of Zen in America. He is known for standing for what he believes in and encouraging his community to live authentically in the world. He takes a global view in his thinking and teaches the ways of self-reliance from the teachings of his teacher, the "one movement" Hakuyu Taizen Zenji. His style is unique with forward thinking and creativity that challenges the core beliefs of Zen in America. He is known for standing for what he believes in and encouraging his community to live authentically in the world. He takes a global view in his thinking and teaches the ways of self-reliance from the teachings of his teacher, the "one movement" Hakuyu Taizen Zenji. His first book in 2010 was Among the Ghosts where he discussed the loss of American Buddhism, creativity, and his own spiritual development after practicing Zen Buddhism in America for twenty-four years. His second book, Selling in Buddhist America, was an investigation into the economics of American Zen centers. His newest book, No Buddha, No Path, No Peace! (edited by the esteemed American Zen teacher Dan Welch), was published in 2013 and is a collection of essays that examine many of the issues faced by both American Zen and the larger Buddhist world. He is also editor of Buddhist Thinkers of Our Time: Essential Writings from the Theosophical Publishing House, published in 2009. Tanner has written for American Zen Buddhist Weekly and The Huffington Post, and his work has been featured on CNN International, NewsHour, ABC, NBC, CBS, PBS, and BBC Radio 4. He has been a guest on The Joe Rogan Experience and has appeared on
