[SUNDAY 26TH JANUARY 2019]: #Classic #Music.. Listen: 'A Little Evil' - The Boss - #MTV Icon.. Q: How do I reduce memory usage by WebSocketClient in.NET? I am using the.NET WebSocketClient class to create a simple chat program. The chat server is running on the app server and the chat client is running on the client machine. The clients receive a HTTP request containing the initial message and then sends messages to the server until the connection is terminated. For a chat server with a given initial message in the standard format, the amount of bytes is constant and can be measured. However, the allocation of the WebSocketClient is O(n) regardless of the number of connected clients. I was wondering if there is a way to reduce the memory usage of the WebSocketClient object because then I could allow more concurrent users (on the client) to run the chat client. Is there a way to allocate more memory to the WebSocketClient object? Or does a client ultimately just need the objects necessary to transmit the data 6d1f23a050
