That couldn't happen now, because about 30 percent of the U.S. population is infected with the virus that causes the painful blistering rash, doctors said. Yet seven U.S. athletes confirmed to have a case of chicken pox -- a milder form of the disease -- were at the Olympics in London this summer, and most said the illness didn't interfere with their ability to train or play. There were 20 known cases of shingles in the U.S. last year, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Some 2,000 cases were reported to the agency in 2007. Sharing needles and failure to cover cuts leave athletes at risk of being infected by the virus. "If athletes aren't vaccinated, they could pass it on to their teammates," said Michele Ragusa, a medical officer in the CDC's occupational health division.
